Early morning after having breakfast at your lodge in Karatu at around 0730hrs to 0800hrs you will depart

Park is the most famous park on the northern circuit of Tanzania with the greatest population of wildlife than means endless plains. The park covers a total area of approximately 14,763 square kilometers with more than 2 million mammals inhabiting the park. The great annual migration involves more than a million wildebeests accompanied by some 250,000 zebras and antelopes and it is one of the 7 wonders of the world. This is exactly what makes this park the most famous park. The park is also home to more than 500 birds' species including the ostriches, kori bustard, starlings, weavers, marabou storks, vultures, eagles, kingfishers, rollers etc.

Animals that can be found inside the park are like the impalas, gazelles, topi, hartebeest, giraffes, hippo, buffalo, dik dik, waterbuck and predators such as lions, leopards, cheetahs, hyena, jackals, caracals, serval cats etc. The scenery of Serengeti on the south east is the short grass plains. The northern part of Serengeti also known as kogatende has more hills and rocks. To the western corridor known as Grumeti there are rivers, valleys as well as forests. Some areas in the heart of Serengeti heading up north of Serengeti are dotted with kopjes. The Serengeti National Park can be visited all year round but the best time to visit is during the dry each year. During End of July to September the Migration can be found in the Northern Serengeti where they resident Nile crocodiles with annual fish.

DAY 4: CENTRAL TO NORTH SERENGETI

Early morning after breakfast at your accommodation inside Serengeti, you will drive to the northern part of Serengeti which is also known as Kogatende following the great migration. We will do a game drive en-route.

As we head to the north, good sightings of giraffes, herds of buffalo and elephants can often be seen. While the Serengeti has abundant wildlife, it is best known for the annual Great Migration. Vast numbers of wildebeests accompanied by large numbers of zebra and antelope migrate in an annual pattern, constantly seeking fresh grazing. The precise timing of the Migration is entirely dependent upon the rainfall patterns each year. During End of July to September the Migration can be found in the Northern Serengeti where they are crossing the Mara River following the greener pastures of Maasai Mara where they provide the Mara river resident Nile crocodiles with annual fish.

After Lunch and an extensive game drive, we head for our partner tented camp for dinner and overnight.

THE GREAT MIGRATION

Whats the Great Migration?

The Serengeti wildebeest migration is one of the most spectacular events to see in Tanzania. This is the periodic regular movement of more than a million of wildebeests accompanied by some 250,000 zebras, 200,000 gazelles and some 12,000 elands seeking for fresh food and water. Also predators including leopards, cheetah, hyena, lions and crocs make sure only the strongest will survive in this natural spectacle. The position of the migration depends on the periodic rains and relatively predictable on where to find the herds.

A SHORT SUMMARY OF THE GREAT MIGRATION:

The short rains begin in the months of November and December where the herds move to the short grass plains in Serengeti. This is far south of Serengeti and Ndutu which is part of Ngorongoro Conservation Area.

They stay at these areas through January, February and March where they give birth of than 500000 new born calves by January and February. These areas are safer because predators can be spotted making it an ideal place for calving. Predators are after the new borns during this time and you may witness stalking and hunting during this period of time. After the plains dry, the wildebeest are forced to move in search of fresh grass in the western corridor. After bearing their young ones, around April the wildebeest herds begin to drift northwest towards the central Serengeti, drawing with them thousands of zebra and lower groups of antelope.

During May, they spread out heading to the western part of Serengeti National Park. In June, they spread out heading further west to the Grumeti river which is a channel of pools where they congregate and blocked on their trip towards the northern part. This is where the crocodiles of the Grumeti River get their feast. Each migrating animal must face the challenge of crossing the crocodile- infested river. As June moves into July, the hundreds of thousands of wildebeest and zebra accompanied by antelopes continue to head north along the western edge of the Serengeti toward the Mara River in the north of the Serengeti. These river crossings are arguably one of the most famous wildlife events on Earth.

During late July and August, the migration moves far north of Serengeti National Park known as Kogatende passing through the central part of Serengeti and Grumeti reserve. Arriving on the north Serengeti, this is where the spectacular crossing happens at the mara river which goes through until September. The migration arrives at the Mara River in groups of thousands where they gather and cross. A huge number of adults and calves are lost to crocodile and predators attacks, drowned or crushed by the herd and many of the young ones are separated from their mothers.

During October, the herds move on the far north to the Masai Mara reserve. During November, the herds move towards the south following the short grass plains through eastern part of Serengeti and this is where the migration pattern begin.
